that he comes nearer to being the Chauncey pepew of England than any other Englishman ne can readily name. Both men have at bottom very serious natures, and both on the surface are serious. They seem, that is, less serious then they really are. I use the word serious in French sense; which is, perhaps, but imperctly naturalized in the English and American languages. It has no relation to the sense in which it is used by pictists, and of course it does not mean dismal or solemn or anything of that Nobody would affirm either of Mr. Chauncey pepew or of Mr. Lockwood that he was solemn, net both do in fact take serious views of life and of duty; both are very much in earnest, both have convictions and professional and business capacities of a high order; and very strict busiepress the flow of spirits which is natural to ath or to pull a long face, or to bury in a napkin or elsewhere the lighter gifts which have bestowed on them. Mr. Depew is not a entral because he can convulse a dinner-table or an audience. Mr. Lockwood is not a worse but a better advocate for his light handling of difficult points, nor yet for the power of draughts manship and of caricature which enables him to hit off the weak point of an adversary or of a bostile witness, or-be it said in a whisperetimes of the judge himself.

Nobody is more dangerous than the man with shom you think yourself perfectly safe. Mr. Lockwood tackles a hostile witness in the tone in which he might ask him to dinner or tell him his latest good thing. The result is that the witness, unless he be uncommonly sharp, be omes unconsciously and imperceptibly less hostile and less on his guard, so that sometimes, be fore he knows where he is, he has given himself watchful foe. A spectacle of this kind is extremely entertaining to the spectator; less so to victim, when once he has become aware whither the primrose path down which he has been gently conducted really leads.

Mr. Lockwood is not an orator of the stamp with Mr. Depew, when Mr. Depew is really he is at all times an effective and sometimes an trable speaker. The standard of speaking at the English bar is not high, if you consider forensic efforts from a rhetorical or oratorical point of view. Sir Charles Russell was perhaps the only advocate who had the great traditions of and had a very distinct and original style of his wn; sometimes a style of great beauty. But Mr. Lockwood is so good all round, as Sir Charles was, that he too takes a place apart, and keeps tt, and is, I think, mounting steadily higher. The world of London is a more agreeable world to know him you would find the atmosphere pleasanter and the conversation the brighter for his genial presence. G. W. S.

LAID BY BISHOP POTTER.

THE CORNERSTONE OF THE NEW GRACE CHAPEL PUT IN PLACE.

cornerstone of the new Grace Chapel, in East Fourteenth-st., near First-ave., was laid by Bishop Potter yesterday. A description of the chapel and the other buildings of the group ap-peared in The Tribune of yesterday. A great conregation assembled, and from the windows of the be ween which was presented to them below. On Grace Church, who gave the beautiful music for the occasion. A number of the clerky of the dio-cese were present, and also many laymen, includ-ing George Macculloch Miller and George Bliss.

The Rev. Dr. W. R. Huntington, rector of Grace Parish, presided. The Episcopal service prescribed for such occasions was followed, the choir, after the first prayer, singing the hymn, "O God, our help in ages past." The list of articles which he de-posited within the stone was then read. Bishop Potter then took a trowel and mallet of ivory and silver, and laid the stone with the prescribed form-ular transfer.

The Rev. George F. Neison made an address, in which he traced the mission work carried on near the site of the new chapel in connection with Grace Parish from its inception in the building formerly occupied by "Billy" McGlory, at No. 549 East Fourteenth-st. The Rev. J. V. Chalmers also spoke, and Bishop Potter made a brief congratulatory address, in the course of which he referred in terms of gratification to the fact that Grace Church is a free church. He eulogized the progressive character of the work of the chapel, and predicted for it a glorious future.

The services closed with the blessing pronounced by the Bishop.

A PEW GIVEN AS A MEMORIAL TO GRACE

CHURCH.

CHURCH.

The will and codicil of Mrs. Mary T. Porter, who died on June 7, the widow of George Porter, was filed in the office of the Surrogate yesterday. She gives to her nephew, Frank H. Gifford, of New-Bedford, Mass., $5.000. She leaves $50.000 in trust for her sister, Elizabeth Gifford. The rector, wardens and vestrymen of Grace Church receive the pew in the church which formerly belonged to her husband, to hold as a memorial, the pew to remain free forever. The directors of the Expectation Library Association, of Skaneateles, N. I., receive $1.000. The residue of the estate, which is valued at $15.000, is given to the nephews and misces of the testator. Frank H. Gifford, Heien C. Gifford, Camilla H. Davenport, Frederick M. Thomas, Clara M. Craig, Mary E. Thomas, Emma T. Rhoades and William E. Porter. The sum of $80 is left to her niece, Matilde Wernecke, James 8, Creves is named executor.

TRURSTON BIRDS RETAIN THE RECORD. Philadelphia, June 18 (Special).—The record for distance in the day held by the H. G. Thurston loft, of Fall River, at 450 miles, continues with the loft, but in the journey of yesterday the distance was increased to 508 miles. The start was from Amberst, Va. at 5:16 a. m.; the return was Rex at 5:05 p. m.; the time out, 770 minutes, and the special lift yards. Birds out to-day for this record are to the Royal Bive Line lofts, of Woodbury, from 150 miles, and to the Louis Mehler loft in this city from 457 miles.

RICHARD CROKER ABROAD.

PATING THE PENALTY OF GREATNESS. From The Boston Herald.

The indications are that Mr. Richard Croker's movements are going to be very carefully chronicled for the information of his countrymen while he is taveling abroad. That is one of the penalties of travelling abroad. That is or suddenly departing greatness. A RARE SELF-SACRIFICE.

From The Providence Journal.

Croker is shrewd. He has borne with his bad health up to this time, so he tells us, because he sould not leave his mother-in-law. She was it, and i was his duty to stand by her. It is only because the is better that he now begins to think of taking care of himself. Such self-sacrificing devotion is all too rare in this world. A man capable of it surely could not make a fortune by indirect and crooked ways.

A HABIT HE CAN AFFORD.

From The Washington Post.

Boss Croker carried his special train habit to burope.

PARTLY TRUE, AT LEAST.

Richard Croker, his foot on his native (Irish) heath, announces urbi et orbi—to New-York and the satiying districts—that he didn't quit because he satiying districts—that he is in Europe for his health, that he expects to stay there indefinitely, and that he is "out of politics forever." The last part of this announcement has the look of truth. From The Hartford Courant.

HE SHOWS HIS SAGACITY AGAIN.

From The Abbany Express.

Mr. Croker is on the other side of the ocean, and there is no intelligent person in the country who believes that he will return for years. He knows better than the members of the Lexow Committee can know what kind of a story of infamy has be told of the government of the city of New-York, eo, by taking time by the forelock, he once more displays his sagacity.

WHERE HE IS MOST WANTED. where he is most waxing.

Mr. Croker should not imagine that there is any sarning desire that he should remain in politics; i would have been a fine thing for New-York if he had retired from politics before he ever went in but it is the scuttled, abandoned and sinking Tambany which shricks out that Mr. Croker has no values to retire from politics just at the time when his pirate-like methods in the personnent of the politics are being exposed.

MANY MESSAGES OF SORROW SENT TO JUDGE PHELPS'S FAMILY.

THE GRAND EXALTED RULER SUSTAINED.

INDORSED BY THE ELKS AT JAMESTOWN.

Jamestown, N. Y. June 18 (Special).—After making every possible effort to wreck the meeting of the Grand Lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the boiling members of the order withdrew this afternoon, and refused to participate further in the proceedings of the Grand Lodge, which assembled here to-day. As is now well known, the trouble which has arisen is mainly one of jealousy between two sets of officers. One set decided in favor of Jamestown for the annual meeting, and another set in tavor of Adams to the Judged from the result of the vote taken in the meeting of the Grand Lodge this afternoon, those who were opposed to Jamestown were in a hopeless minority, while the friends of this city outnimbered their opponents four to one. In the meeting of the Grand Lodge this afternoon a crucial test of what is known as the "kickers" came in a vote on the question to adopt a rule of procedure for this meeting of the Grand Lodge. The opponents of this city endeavored to have the motion to adopt the report of the Committee on Laws and Appeals laid on the table. A vote was taken, and fourteen delegates voted to lay the report upon the table. A showing of the opposite vote was greeted with exultant cheers, as it was seen that Jamestown had won by an overwhelming majority and that the Grand Lodge meeting here was a regular and legal one. On the announcement of this vote the defeated delegates withdrew from the hall. There were only fourteen of them, and they represented the Albany, Cleveland and Newark lodges.

The action of the grand exalted ruler in deposing the grand trustees who called the meeting at Atlantic City was indorsed by the meeting.

Early this morning an injunction was secured by Arthur C. Wade, as attorney for the delegates who were in favor of the meeting here against holding a meeting outside of this State. The injunction was served upon the grand exalted rufer and the secretary.

Ex-Alderman Morris was born in the Ninth Ward of this city, seventy years ago, and was educated in the public schools. His first business occupation was as a clerk in the grocery-store of the late ex-Ablerman Joseph Britton, at rGeene and Fourth sts. About thirty years ago, with a partner, named Fowler, he opened a grocery-store at Twelfth-st. and University Place, under the firm name of Morpurchased his partner's interest and continued the business alone till about 1880, when he sold out to an employe, who afterward retired and went to Montana. His father, Jacob Morris, was an extensive real estate operator, and among other traisactions acquired large plots of land in what was then the suburbs of Newark. Afterward this land was incorporated in the city limits of Newark, and its value multiplied many times. Mr. Morris inherited the greater portion of his father's estate, and was a much wealthier man than was commonly supposed. He was so unostentatious and unassuming that no one not intimately acquainted

When his son, William H. W. Morris, still a young man, was a mere lad, Alderman Morris started him in the diredging business, in which the son amassed a considerable fortune before retiring to devote his attention to the management of his father's business affairs.

Over thirty years ago Alderman Morris became the husband of Miss Harrison, a daughter of Hiram Harrison, then a wealthy retired real estate operator. Miss Harrison's brother, Thomas, was some years ago Superintendent of the Public Schools of this city. Mr. Morriss daughter, Miss Fannie, was married to Thomas B. Clarke, son of Professor George W. Their performance was much more attractive than when it was seen at the Metropolitan Opera House a few months ago, because in New-Jersey all the children are allowed to act. The complete exhibition has not been given ance. Nothing more complete, graceful or remark-able in its kind has been given here in many years if indeed it has ever been equalled. Hagenbeck's trained animals, at the new Hagen beck Arena, Manhattan Beach, have apparently again jumped into popular favor. The wonderful feats that the lions, tigers, bears, leopards and the many other beasts are made to perform by their masters astonished the audience of last night. The arena, which has been built especially for the performance of the Hagenbeck animals, is arranged to seat 2,000 persons, and every seat gives an unob-structed view of the cage in which the performances take place. In connection with the perform ances in the arena a menageric has been built wherein all the animals that take part in the ring which disport themselves in various acrobation tricks and funny antics. The performance yesterday included the acts of Mile. Saida Sakantala, with her den of trained boa constrictors and doves; J. Penje, with his equestrian lioness, Helena, and the white horse, Columbus; M. Beketow, the Russian clown, with his three trained wild boars; Miss Mazella Berg, with the trick elephant Topsy, two boar hounds and two Shetland pontes; Mr. Weston, with his trained seals, and Professor Edward Darling's exhibition with five Nubian lions.

HOT WORDS AGAINST TAMMANY.

OL A. S. BACON ADDRESSES THE ANTI-TAM

MANY DEMOCRACY. About a thousand people crowded into the Irving Hall, at No. 21s Broome-st., last evening to hold a mass-meeting of the Anti-Tammany Democof the or-Company is opposite where he Brooklyn, described Tammany Hall as "a great many Hall it will smash us," said Colonel Bacon, who aliaded to the Lexow committee's work in terms of high praise. He said that the bombs the committee placel under Tammany Hall would level that octopus-like institution to the ground, and the voters in November would build a bonfire of what "propagates vice for the purpose of bleeding it There is no vice so vile but that Tammany will There is no vice so vile but that Tammany will bleed it. New-York is the only city in the world where you can get a license to steal. The money collected from vice goes from the wardman's hand through different graties of theves, until it gets into the hands of Richard Croker, alias John Miles. The mention of Dr. Parkhurst's good work was loudly cheered. 'Tammany will take anything,' concluded the speaker, 'from a redhot stove to the coins from a dead man's eyes, Richard Croker shows himself a coward, and practically confesses his guilt by running away."

Ex-Sheriff 'Jimmy' O'Brien, who followed, termed 'Dick' Croker an assassin and a creature who lived luxuriously on human frailty, viciousness and crime. Tammany, the speaker said, was composed of blackmaliers, assassins and thleves. The rights of the people were sold every day in the year, and the Tammany vampitres even profited by the deaths of men, destruction of the octoous rear, and the Jahman you to deaths of met. Speeches urging the destruction of the octopus n Fourteenth-st. were then made in English or in German by J. J. Murphy. Adolph Ury, ex-Assistant district-Attorney Andrew D. Parker, ex-Senator leading F. Langbein, and others.

NEW RECRUITS FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE

REGINNING THE WORK OF INTERESTING WORK-ING GIRLS IN THE CAMPAIGN.

Recruits from hitherto untried fields spoke last evening at the home of Miss Stagg, No. 30 West Sixty-first-st., in favor of woman suffrage. The meeting was the first of a series to be held for the meeting was the first of a series to be nead for the purpose of arousing interest among working girls in the suffrage movement. Many self-supporting women were present, the dramatic profession predominating. To interest and entertain, as well as instruct, the wise young hostesses had prepared a contract than a contract that the property of the contract that the property of the contract than a contract that the property of the contract that the contract that the property of the contract that the contract that the contract that the contract that pleasing musical programme, and original plano selections by Miss Emma Steiner and vocal solos by Mrs. Fielding Roselle were interspersed with the speeches. In order that enthusiasm and fresh forces might be wisely guided by "the powers that be," might be wisely guided by "the powers that be,"
Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake was requested to open the meeting. The efforts of her young assistants were apparently gratifying, and the speaker's frame of mind was a happy one. Amusing anecdotes, mild sarcism and gentle thrusts at the "sterner sex" kept her hearers in a continuous state of laughter.
A description of the ideal home, followed by an A description of the real home and the attending contingencies, created much merriment.

Mrs. Blake was followed by Miss Harriette A.

Keyser, whose statement that 1,100 additional names had been sent that day to Albany was loudly ap-plauded. Miss Keyser was also somewhat facetious, but she partly exonerated men for their "rash judg-ments of woman" on the ground that they had so little knowledge of her. "Woman," she said, "has been discussed ever since the days of Mother Eve, and she is no better understood now than she was

Miss Estelle Clayton, one of the hostesses and coworkers, read an interesting paper, to which she gave the title: "Woman's True Position, or a Pleafor the Better Understanding of the Position of the Sexes." "Most men," she began, "acknowledge that they don't understand us; they call us puzzles, and conundrums but I notice that they don't give us up. Next to woman, woman-suffrage is most misunderstood, but before we are through with this campaign both will be better understood. Men have, up to the present time, seemed to consider that life was a feast set for their special benefit, and only on sufferance did they admit the beings who not only gave them life, but to whom they owe, in many cases, all that makes life worth living."

The speaker added that nothing would go right except as woman goes right, and to be able to do this she must have her rights. It was declared that everything should be decided by individual ability, not sex.

Miss Katharine Stags, at whose home the meet-

Miss Katharine Stagg, at whose home the meeting was held, spoke with much enthusiasm, and closely held the attention of her hearers. Her remarks principally referred to the Declaration of Independence, and the quotation "life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness," was the theme about which she wove her arguments. She declared that the powers of man were only equal to those of women, and that man had no right, legal or otherwise, to define what should constitute for woman "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

The other speakers were Mrs. Kelly, a forewoman with Ehrich & Co., and "Brick" Pomeroy.

PORTER AND JOHNSON MAKE THE FASTEST MILES EVER RIDDEN AT A PUBLIC MEET.

Waltham, Mass, June 18.-A tremendous smashafternoon on the new Waltham cement cycle track at the racemeet of the Waltham Cycle Club. Arthur W. Porter, of the Waltham Cycle Club, es-tablished a series of records, paced against time with flying start, that promises long to stand un-beaten. He did the quarter in 0:30 2-5, the half in 1:01 4-5, and the mile in 2:06. John S. Johnson, of Syracuse, rode a mile for Class B, making the quarter in 0:281-5, the half in 1:01, third quarter in 1:25, and the mile in 2:03 2-5. He would have ridden under two minutes had not Murphy's bungling pacemaking interfered with him. These miles by Por-ter and Johnson are the fastest ever ridden in the made in private trials. Zimmerman had held the record up to to-day, having ridden on the same track last fall in 2:073-5. Berlo and Rich, professionals, beat the world's record for a half-mile on a tandem, unpaced, by one second, doing it in 57 seconds. world in public, all the faster records having been
